been advised by Lord Lyons, Monsieur Messaire, French Minister, and Hon. William H. Seward to adopt the stage as a profession, he did so, and went to England, where he studied his art, and appeared in this city in 1865, playing as star a round of Stakespearian characters. The character of Uncle Pole is in the hands of Mr. L. R. Stockwell, an actor of sterling merit, and Zos, the actorom, is represented by Miss Florence Elmore, a lady of extraordinary personal attractions, and said to possess considerable histrionic talent. The St. Louis Republican says of this entertainpossess considerable histrionic talent. The St. Louis Regulations says of this entertainment: "The Garthold Combination presented the 'Octoroon' at the Grand Opera-House last evening to a large attendance, and with effects that promise to draw largely on our play-going people. The members of the company are selected with special reference to the roles of the play, and the ensemble of presentation is as complete as it is possible to make it. The colored vocalists made a very atrong hit by their singing last night, and were encared over and over again. It is the best presentation of this play ever seen upon our stage."
